PREFACE

One of the major projects of the North Carolina Confederate Centennial Commission during the four year centennial observance of the War between the States is the publication of a New Roster of North Carolina Troops. Towards this end, the Commission has employed Mr. Louis Manarin as Editor. Mr. Manarin, Associate editor of The Wartime Papers of R. E. Lee, and a PhD candidate at Duke University, is well qualified for this duty. The materials in this publication are the results of his preliminary research in the National Archives and are by no means complete. They are presented at this time, however, as an endeavor to assist the historian and genealogist in their quest for information on the men who fought for North Carolina and the Confederacy.

INTRODUCTION

North Carolina's military contribution during the Civil War has been difficult to decipher from the mass of records. Researchers find it hard to trace units from the State because of numerous and confusing designations. As battalions and regiments were organized and mustered into service, they were given a line-number. These numbers ran consecutively. At the same time the battalion or regiment would receive a numerical designation according to its branch of service, or the nature and character of its organization. As usual, there were exceptions to this rule, and these are explained below. Add to the confusion created by double numerical designations, the local designations and names of commanding officers and the picture becomes more complex.

In 1903 the United States Government began to compile a service record for each Confederate soldier. Information pertaining to him was copied from Muster Rolls and other original records. In conjunction with the project three of the following tables were compiled. The fourth, "Union Regiments," was compiled from records on file at the National Archives. These tables are necessarily incomplete because the original compilers were limited to records on loan to and in possession of the Federal Government. Additions have been made.

When the war broke out, the only military organization in the State, aside from a few volunteer companies, was the Militia. This organization embraced all white males between 18 and 45. Because of a long period of peace, the Militia was only organized on paper and had no practical existence.

When the Legislature assembled on May 1, 1861, it authorized Governor Ellis to raise ten regiments of State Troops before the State Convention met. Under the act, an Adjutant General and other staff officers were provided for to carry out the organization. The regiments were numbered consecutively as they were mustered into State service regardless of branch of service; however, the cavalry and artillery regiments were also numbered consecutively according to their branch. For example, the Ninth Regiment State Troops was also designated the First Cavalry Regiment, and the Tenth Regiment State Troops was designated the First Artillery Regiment.

Under the pre-secession laws of the State, Colonel John F. Hoke was Adjutant General. It was through his office that the Volunteers were organized independent of the ten regiments of State Troops authorized by the Legislature. By July 18, 1861, fourteen Volunteer regiments had been organized and transferred to the Confederate State service. Colonel Hoke resigned his position as Adjutant General after he was elected Colonel of the Thirteenth Regiment Volunteers. General James G. Martin, who had been appointed Adjutant General under the act to organize ten regiments of State Troops, was ordered by the Governor to take charge of both offices, that of Adjutant General State Troops and Adjutant General Volunteers, until the Legislature met. That body elected General Martin Adjutant General of the State, thus consolidating the two previously independent offices.

When General Martin assumed his new office he found that there were ten regiments of State Troops designated First through Tenth, and fourteen regiments of Volunteers designated First through Fourteenth.

The duplicate set of numbers, First Regiment State Troops through the Tenth Regiment State Troops and the First Regiment Volunteers through the Tenth Regiment Volunteers created confusion in the field, at Richmond, and at Raleigh. The Confederate and State authorities decided that the State Troops should retain their designations of one through ten, while the Volunteer regiments should be redesignated starting with eleven. This was carried out on November 14, 1861, by Special Order, Number 222, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Richmond. Thus, the fourteen volunteer regiments were redesignated the Eleventh through the Twenty-Fourth Regiments North Carolina Troops. There was some irregularity about the election of field officers for the Ninth Regiment Volunteers, and their commissions were withheld. Into this vacancy was placed a regiment known as the Second Cavalry that had been organized under the act to organize ten regiments of State Troops. Since there was no Ninth Regiment Volunteers, the Second Cavalry became the Nineteenth Regiment North Carolina Troops. All regiments organized after the redesignation of the Volunteer regiments were numbered consecutively beginning with the Twenty-Fifth Regiment. The first ten regiments were officially designated "State Troops," while the old Volunteer regiments, redesignated Eleven through Twenty-Four, were officially designated "North Carolina Troops." All other regiments were given both designations, (State Troops and North Carolina Troops), without official distinction.

The call for men depleted the ranks of the Militia organizations, leaving only the officers who were exempt to aid in enrolling conscripts. Except for the officers of the Militia, there were no State military organizations until the act to provide a "Guard for Home Defense" was ratified on July 7, 1863. This became known as the Home Guards. All able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 50, exempt from Confederate service, were enrolled and organized. The officers of the Militia were enrolled in the Home Guard, thus in effect, dissolving the Militia. The Home Guard was organized into a battalion in each county (except in four counties, which furnished only one company each). Regiments were formed in several large counties, and in some cases adjacent counties united to form a regiment. In all, eight regiments were formed.

The Home Guard consisted of two classes, those who were drilled regularly and subject to immediate orders to move to any point of danger within the State, and those who were not required to be drilled and who were only ordered out when their county was invaded.

On February 17, 1864, an act to organize "Reserves" was adopted by the Confederate Congress. A large number of men in the Home Guard were enrolled in the Confederate service. This reduced the Home Guard to such an extent that when ordered out they were consolidated into temporary regiments and were divided into first, second, and third class. Each class was to serve successive tours of duty of about thirty days each. When each class was called out it was organized into three regiments, thus making nine regiments of Home Guards.

The law passed by the Confederate Congress on February 17, 1864, placed in the "Reserves" those men between the ages of 17 and 18 and between 45 and 50. The younger age group was called out in April and May, 1864, and by the end of June eight battalions of Junior Reserves were organized. As these battalions were organized into regiments they were given line-numbers. The First and Sixth Battalions, with two other companies added, were organized into the First Regiment of Reserves (Seventieth North Carolina Regiment). The Second and Fifth Battalions, with two additional companies, were organized into the Second Regiment of Reserves (Seventy-First North Carolina Regiment). The Fourth, Seventh, and Eighth Battalions were organized into the Third Regiment of Reserves (Seventy-Second North Carolina Regiment).

The words "Junior" and "Senior" were not officially used and the first three "Reserve" regiments were designated First, Second, and Third Regiment, or Seventieth, Seventy-First, and Seventy-Second North Carolina. When the men between 45 and 50 were called out, they were organized into regiments designated as the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Regiments of Reserves, or Seventy-Third, Seventy-Fourth, Seventy-Sixth, Seventy-Seventh, and Seventy-Eighth North Carolina. The Seventy-Fifth was the Seventh Cavalry.

Up to this time the only large group of men that had escaped military service were the detailed men. These men were under Confederate jurisdiction and could not be recruited into any State organization. In November, 1864, the Confederate authorities directed that the detailed men in North Carolina be organized into regiments and battalions. Three regiments were organized and designated the First, Second, and Third Regiments Detailed Men. Their line-numbers were Eighty-First, Eighty-Second, and Eighty-Third North Carolina Regiments.

The first section, "Numerical Designations of Confederate Organizations," is a list of all units up to regimental level, by numerical designation. Each numerical segment is divided according to Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry. Within these categories they are listed by battalion and regiment, in that order. In many instances the commanding officers are given along with specific information concerning the organization of the unit. The scarcity of information on State organizations such as Militia and Home Guards is because many of the records were poorly kept, and those that survived were not turned over to the Federal Government in quantity. To facilitate research, each designation which a unit received is entered in its numerical or alphabetical order with cross reference notes.

The second section, "Local Designations of Confederate Units," is a synonym file of companies, battalions, and regiments that served from the State. Most of the companies, enthused with a patriotic spirit, adopted a nick-name, which usually included the name of their town or county. These, however, were supplanted as the war progressed by the use of the commanding officer's name when referring to the unit. The method of numerically designating battalions and regiments was established by the State and Confederate authorities; however, the men in the ranks would generally refer to their company, battalion, or regiment by their commanding officer's name.

Consequently, units in the Southern army were more commonly known by their commanding officer rather than their numerical designation. It should be noted that often after a commanding officer was killed or otherwise unable to retain command, the unit would still be called his company, battalion, or regiment, even though he no longer commanded it. The table herein reproduced is alphabetically arranged, giving the local designation or commanding officer's name first, followed by the letter designation assigned the company within the regiment it was attached to, plus the numerical designation of the regiment. With regard to battalions and regiments, the local designation or commanding officer's name appears first, followed by the numerical designation.

Brigades and Divisions were organized by the Confederate authorities. In some instances brigades were made up entirely of troops from one state, commanded by an officer from that state. To trace the progress of each regiment throughout the war would go beyond the limits set for this work. Consequently, with the exception of Thomas' Legion, we have found it necessary to restrict this work to regimental organizations and below.

The third section, "Union Regiments," is a list of North Carolina regiments who fought for the Union. Loyal Union regiments were often organized before they had a full complement of companies and men. The Third Regiment North Carolina Mounted Infantry was organized in June 1864, even though only one company of the seven that were started was mustered in during that month; five in October 1864; two in February 1865 (one of which started enlisting men in June 1864); and two began recruiting and were mustered in in March 1865. Most of these units were organized in occupied areas along the coast and in the mountains.

The fourth section, "Military Installations," is an index to camps, posts, and stations, both Union and Confederate, in North Carolina. This list is the most incomplete of the four. Wherever possible the location of the installation has been indicated, and reference made to its location in the Atlas to Accompany the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies. In addition to the scarcity of information on some of the entries, it must be noted that some of the original cards in this file were lost when transferred to their present location at the National Archives.

To supplement the information herein recorded the researcher is referred to: Histories of the Several Regiments and Battalions from North Carolina in the Great War 1861-1865, edited by Walter Clark; Bethel to Sharpsburg, by Daniel Harvey Hill; and The War of the Rebellion; A Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies.

Aug. 30, 1861. Organized 10 cos. Designated 10th Regt. N.C. Vols. (S.T.) by S.O. 222, A&IGO, Nov. 14, 1861. Changed to 19th Regt. by S.O. 230, A&IGO, Nov. 20, 1861. Four members of Co. C of this Regt. were formerly members of Co. D, Cohoon's Bn. Va. Inf.

2nd Regt. N.C. Arty. (36th Regt. N.C. State Troops)

Col. Wm. Lamb

36th Regt. N.C.S.T., and Cape Fear Regt. of Arty.

There appears to have been a conflict between the State and the Confed. Govt. authority as to the organization of the 36th Regt. N.C.T. as a result of which there were apparently two Regt. of same designation in existence from May 1862, to Nov. 1863, at which latter date the extra cos. were transferred to other Regts. The Regt. as finally established is composed of the cos. assigned to it by S.O. 247, Hdqrs. Dist. of the Cape Fear, dated May 12, 1862.

Capt. Southerland's Co. (A) became (new) Co. I, 1st Regt. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Purdie's Co. (B) served as Co. K, 18th Regt. N.C. Inf. to Oct 1861, and again after Mar. 1862.

Capt. Starr's Co. (B) became Co. B, 13th Bn. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Cumming's Co. (C) became Co. C, 13th Bn. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Malcom McNair's Co. appears to have been assigned to this Regt. as Co. D, but probably did not so serve. It became Co. E, 3rd Regt. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Leecraft's Co. (G) was disbanded about Apr. 1862, and some of the men transferred to (old) Co. H, 3rd Regt. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Adams' Co. (G) became Co. D, 13th Bn. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Herring's Co. (I) became (3rd) Co. G, 3rd Regt. N.C. Arty.

Capt. Jos. B. Starr's Co. B finally became Capt. Geo. B. Atkins' N.C.

Battery and was serving in Maj. Basil C. Manley's Arty. Bn. which was a field organization composed of Batteries from various states. Paroled at Greensboro, N.C.

Regt. appears to have been organized in July 1861.

(old) Co. A, about Sept., 1862, became Capt. Calvin Barnes' Co., unattached N.C. Arty. Later it became (new) Co. H, 3rd Regt. N.C. Arty. (40th S.T.)

(new) Co. A was organized at once to take its place.

(old) Co. C in Aug. 1861, became Co. H, 1st Regt. N.C. Arty. (10th S.T.)

(new) Co. C immediately took its place.

A co. commanded by Capt. A.J. Taylor was organized in June 1861, apparently for this Regt. but was (probably in July) transferred to the 7th Regt. N.C. Inf.

2nd Regt. N.C. Arty. Local Designations (con't)

Co. K, Lt. D.K. Bennett's Co.

2nd Bn. Inf. N.C.

Lt. Col. Wharton J. Green
Lt. Col. Chas. E. Shober
Lt. Col. Hezekiah L. Andrews

This organization was composed of 8 cos. (A to H), and was known as Col. Green Indpt. Regt., Wise Legion, but the Regt. did not complete its organization, and the cos. raised for it were formed into a Bn. and designated the 2nd Bn. N.C. Inf. by S.O. 261, A&IGO, dated Dec. 9, 1861.

Local Designations

Co. A, Capt. Milton Smith's Co.
Co. A, Brown Mountain Boys
Co. B, Capt. D. M. Cooper's Co.
Co. D, Capt. Edw. Smith's Co.
Co. E, Capt. W.S. DuBose's Co.
Co. E, Capt. John J. Tucker's Co.
Co. E, The Anthony Grays
Co. F, Capt. Hezekiah L. Andrews' Co.
Co. G, Capt. Wm. H. Wheeler's Co.
Co. H, Capt. L.M. Allen's Co.
Co. H, Madison Guards

Co. C of this Bn. was transferred to the 59th Regt. Va. Inf. by S.O. 268, A&IGO, dated Nov 15, 1862, and became Co. G of that Regt.

Co. D appears to have formed about Sept. 27, 1861, from a part of Capt. Jesse Burtz's Co. "Cherokee Georgia Mountaineers;" by S.O. 84, par 13, A&IGO, Apr. 11, 1864; was transferred, and finally became (2) Co. E, 21st Regt. Ga. Inf.

Co. E was organized Sept. 16, 1861, as Capt. W.S. DuBose's Co. Ga. Vols. Assigned to the 2nd Bn. N.C. Inf. as Co. E, upon its organization. It appears to have been mustered as a Co. in the 55th (Col. Harkie) Ga. Regt. June 30, 1862, but no evidence has been found to show that it actually served as a part of that Regt. It was transferred to the 60th Ga. Inf. per S.O. 84, par 14, A&IGO, and became (2nd) Co. A of that Regt. Co. A. Many of the members of this co. subsequently served in Co. H, 23rd Bn. Va. Inf. Most of these men are reported on muster roll for Apr. 30 to Oct. 31, 1862, as AWOL. Joined Col. Manafus' Regt. Va. S.T.

The 66th Regt. N.C. Inf. (S.T.) was formed by the consolidation of the 8th Bn. N.C. Partisan Rangers and the 13th Bn. N.C. Inf. in accordance with S.O. 234, A&IGO, dated Oct. 2, 1863. Co. D, 8th Bn. N.C. Partisan Rangers, which was assigned to the Regt. as Co. L, apparently never served as such, but subsequently became Capt. W. R. Bass' Unattached Co., N.C. Inf.

Local Designations

Col. J.R.G. Faucette

67th Bn. Home Guards, N.C. (Maj. F.J. McMillan)

67th Regt. N.C. Inf.(S.T.)
Col. John N. Witford

Whitford's Bn. N.C. Partisan Rangers (also known as the 1st Bn. N.C. Local Def. Troops) was organized about Apr. 1863. It was increased to ten companies, A to K, and organized into a Regt. by S.O. 8, Executive Dept. N.C., AGO, dated Jan. 18, 1864. When it was designated the 67th Regt. N.C. Inf.(S.T.) companies A and B were apparently organized from (old) Co. I, 1st N.C. Arty. (10th S.T.)
